Short Bio & Concept

Monica Morganti: from psychotherapy to art

Italy-based self-taught artist, specialized in Mandala artworks for nearly 25 years.

Mandala are geometric figures equipped with a powerful symbolic charge: the circle that characterizes them is a shape that gives order to the world, both internal and external. Being also a practicing Jungian psychoanalyst, Mandala is the idea of personality center, to which everything is related and that is a source of energy.

Her artwork is like a journal of her soul: each image represents a specific time as she express soul through acrylic colors and additional materials such as gold and silver dust, stones, tissues, pearls, Swarovski crystals and collage.

She use different narrative symbols as languages of unconscious, connecting the emotional context of artworks to the viewer. "When I paint I find peace: an emotional moment similar to meditation. The unconscious speaks and I create what I planned yet with another unexpected level which takes even me by surprise. So whenever I paint a new picture, I clarify my mind and find peace in my heart".

Her process begins with a specific emotion, which conjures a series of colors and symbols in an associative process that results in works that are at once complex and arresting. In addition to bold and dominant acrylic tones, she often adds other materials to geometric and floral paintings: each piece resonates evocatively despite coming from a very personal, subconscious place. Indeed, that mysterious generative source adds power to each piece, forming a strikingly intimate and powerful link with the viewer. The canvases combine organic, figurative forms with geometric shapes and abstract patterns that evoke traditions as varied as Ottoman mosaics and Art Deco architecture. Digging through our collective unconscious, Monica Morganti find buried treasure. The result has a great emotional effect on the audience.

She doesn't travel only inside her soul because she really loves to know different countries and cultures and she has travelled all over the world: Arab Emirates, Oman, Jordan, India, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Malaysia, Myanmar, Singapore, China, Hong Kong, Europe. So her paintings are a mixture of languages and symbols of different peoples and her artworks are a cultural melting pot.
